Fly Fishing California Hot Spots Through the Seasons

If you live in California – and I know you do – there's no reason to put your gear away for the off season. The Great Golden State doesn't have an off season! Freshwater, warm water, saltwater, cold-water, all combine to give a great opportunity to explore year-round with a fly rod. Ken will present his ideas on staying in the game all year long and tipping the scales in your favor.

The Calico Syndicate Crew

Come and join the Calico Syndicate Crew for a free event at the Long Beach Casting Club on Sunday, December 2nd at 9:00 that will discuss some of the flies and tactics that have been used to target calico bass. A group of us spent many days this spring and summer targeting calico bass locally and at a few of the offshore islands. We fished, we camped, and we had a great time; it was truly a summer to remember. Come join us for a morning of fly tying, casting instruction, and coffee. It should be a fun time to discuss our adventures as well as the multiple opportunities that we have in southern California to target calico bass on the fly.
